XO Competition Bike

The XO Competition from Swiss Bike folds in half, and with the front wheel and seat removed, everything stuffs into a 36-by-28-by-12-inch carry bag. Dad can put one in the trunk of his car or slide it under his desk at work.

$2,299 (the DX Crossover also folds and is $499); www.swissbike.com

TomTom GO 740 Live

Portable GPS devices continue to add useful features, and with this new unit from TomTom, you can search and navigate to the cheapest or nearest gas station and get five-day weather forecasts for your final destination plus real-time traffic updates. $400 (includes three months of the connected Live service; $10 per month after that); www.tomtom.com

Plantronics Voyager Pro

A cool way to go hands-free with your mobile phone, the Bluetooth device has lots of technology to block out wind and other noises so Dad sounds good, with six hours of continuous-talk battery life. $100; www.plantronics.com

Metropolitan 500 Vacuum

With 500 watts of power, the small, all-steel-construction Metropolitan car vacuum has enough power to suck the chrome off a trailer hitch—and certainly enough to keep Dad's car clean. $70; www.metrovacworld.com

Red Line Coffee

With names like Open Throttle, Double Clutch, Rallye, Apex and Downshift Decaf, what could be better for a caffeine-addicted gearhead dad? $13 per 12-ounce bag; www.redlinecoffee.com

A Day at Bondurant

Give Dad a day at the Bob Bondurant School of High Performance Driving, where for four hours, he will get behind the wheel of a C6 Chevrolet Corvette, a Cadillac CTS-V and the school's Bondurant Pro-Kart. $349; www.bondurant.com
